

Major new rehabilitation centre opens near Wolverhampton

A lifetime in the health care industry has led to an exciting change and major new plans for horse owner Susan Stepp.

A keen show jumper in her younger days, Susan's research led her to believe there was a demand in the area for a rehabilitation centre for horses and so set about establishing The Croft Equine Rehabilitation Centre in Coven.

Explains Susan:

I am very excited about the centre and the plans we have to develop it over the next few months.

"We currently have a Panama Spa hydrotherapy unit but in the near future will develop the centre with plans for a swimming pool, solarium, further stabling and a horsewalker." The hydrotherapy unit helps in the healing of and rapid recovery from many ailments, spanning tendon injuries and soft tissue damage, mud fever, cracked heels and general good health. Susan also has an Equissage physiotherapy system to help keep the horses that visit the centre relaxed and supple.

"For trainers in the area, competition horse owners or simply leisure riders, I hope that the rehabilitation centre will provide them with the services to help keep their horses and ponies in better health," adds Susan.

"The wellbeing of the horse is paramount to the work we are doing and it is great to see animals come to the centre and gradually get better, whether they have pulled muscles, hoof problems or simply need a bit of TLC."
